Dear Dr. McDaniel,

This is just a note to thank you for all I am learning through your teaching. You have showed me a broader perspective on the Scriptures that is helping me to listen better to them. Your amusing comment, "I wish you could see your faces," reflected the somewhat suspicious/hesitant attitude the students may have toward some of the things you show us from your research and creative thought. Certainly I come from a very narrow background and may never come to agree with all you say. But I don't think you expect that. What I sense you want us to understand is that we may have courage and initiative and joy in examining the scriptures.

and that they should make sense to us.

Your outstanding character and integrity are a warm spot in the seminary as well.

So... please forgive my suspicious face.

I am learning to love and hear the word better through your classes.

With appreciation,

Mary Kruse.
